- At a meeting of the standing committee of the Philippine Chinese Anti-Communist Anti-Soviet Salvation Association (ACASSA) held on 25 September 1953, Chinese Nationalist Minister CHOU Shu-kai proposed that ACASSA issue a proclamation regarding the Overseas Chinese Representative Assembly (OCRA) then scheduled for October 1953 in Peiping. CHOU suggested that the ACASSA proclamation make it clear that any delegation of Philippine Chinese attending the Chinese Communist Government-proposed OCRA would in no way represent overseas Chinese in the Philippines. CHOU further suggested that the proclamation be published in English and Chinese-language newspapers in the Philippines.¹
